

Scaling for Impact

2022 WHO Innovation Forum

In the Western Pacific Region

28-29 April 2022

Let's discuss the sustainability of innovation!

Innovation must evolve from a mere buzzword into a deliberate process of investment and institution building, from ideation into implementation that saves lives.

The World Health Organization Regional Office for the Western Pacific is hosting the 2022 WHO Innovation Forum in the Western Pacific Region: Scaling for Impact to discuss some of the most important topics in public health innovation and to answer the question: What does it take for WHO and Member States in the Western Pacific to harness innovation systematically, on a large scale, with demonstrable benefits to public health?

Public health innovators, ranging from field experts inventing innovative solutions to innovation incubators, digital technology experts, policy advisers, implementers and economists, will participate in the two-day virtual event.

Join us in exploring the next steps of public health innovation to make the Western Pacific the healthiest and safest region.

Register for the Forum here and join us on 28 and 29 April at 9:30 AM (Manila Time, GMT +8).

For more information, visit here or contact wproinnov@who.int.

Our keynote speakers are

Dr Yuichi Tei

Professor of Biomaterials,
The University of Tokyo;
Dean, School of Health
Innovation, Kanagawa
University of Human Services

Dr Mariana Mazzucato

Professor in the Economics of Innovation and Public
Value, University College
London

Dr Albert Park

Chief Economist,
Asian Development Bank